(a) THE WATER OF LIFE

Welcome to Botanist, here we cherish nature and the bounty it provides. For centuries, science and nature have been deeply connected through alchemy, discovery, and experimentation. We invite you to join us on this journey as we explore one of the most essential elements of botany: water. Eau de Vie, the water of life.

Crafted in our Cocktail Lab, Creative Beverage Director Grant Sceney and Executive Chef Hector Laguna have designed a multi-sensory experience of flavour, technique, and storytelling. Each cocktail is paired with a curated bite that enhances and evolves the journey with every sip and taste. While each element is complete on its own, together they create a multi-dimensional experience that lingers long after the last sip. Allow the flavours to unfold, transforming your senses in unexpected ways.

(II) TEQUILA

The product of Blue Weber Agave is permitted to be produced in five provinces in Mexico. Tequila in its unaged (blanco) state is clean and herbaceous. Once briefly rested in oak (reposado) sharp edges are softened and some oak character is taken on. If fully aged in oak (añejo), tequila exhibits caramel, vanilla, and other oak-driven aromas.

There are hundreds of different types of soil, rock and mineral deposits in the world's vineyards. Most vineyard soils can be sorted into about 5 to 6 different types of soil that affect the flavour of wine. While there is no scientific proof associating the taste of 'minerality' to actual minerals in a wine, something does happen. It's almost as though some types of soils act like a tea-bag for water as it passes through to the vine's roots.
